

MUHALI MULALO KENNETH

BIO

Muhali Mulalo Kenneth, joined the University of the Western Cape (UWC) School of Public Health (SOPH) in 2013 as a National Research Foundation (NRF) intern, working as a research assistant for the PURE project that focuses on environmental, biological, and societal influences on obesity and non-communicable diseases. Thereafter, he also worked on Diabetes Prevention Program (DPPSA) Sivile Senza-Lifestyle Africa in 2016 as a research officer, a study that aims to reduce community members' risk for non-communicable diseases by motivating them to eat healthily and engage in physical activity. In 2019 he coordinated the Household and HIV (Sinako) research project, a randomized control trial study with the aim of teaching and encouraging the household HIV competency of people living with HIV. He joins the team of MRC in 2022 on FOODSAMSA, coordinating the fieldwork activities for work packages 4, 5, and 6.
