

NIKI HOLLIDAY

BIO

Niki is a recent graduate from the University of Freiburg with a Master of Science in Global Urban Health. She previously received a Bachelor of Science in Public Health Promotion and a minor in Environmental Health and Safety from Oregon State University.

She has experience working with local level health departments in areas of environmental health and maternal health and nutrition. She also has experience in grant writing and environmental education from her work as the community outreach and development coordinator at the Marys River Watershed Council, an environmental nonprofit.

Niki is especially interested in social determinants of health, health disparities, and putting public health theory into practice.

She will be helping primarily with Work Package 3.
